

PATIENTS MOVED TO NEW HOSPITAL

Alexandria's Modern Institution Is Open to Public.

THE WASHINGTON HERALD, Sept. 20.—The work of moving the new Alexandria Hospital on the north side of Duke street between Washington and Columbus streets, was completed today. The transfer of the fourteen patients into the new hospital was effected yesterday. Five new patients have been received into the hospital since, making a total of nineteen now under treatment at the new institution. The hospital is well furnished throughout and modern in all its appointments. Almost everything to be found in an up-to-date hospital has been installed in this institution.

Despite the fact that the new hospital has just been occupied, everything is running in splendid shape under the management of Miss Fanny Carter, superintendent, who for five years was superintendent of the Emergency Hospital, Washington, and her assistant, Miss Mary Skidmore. In addition there are fourteen nurses in this institution. There is an electric elevator and a modern heating plant in the hospital.

The Dainierfeld residence on Washington street directly adjoining the new hospital is used as a nurses' home and it also has been fully equipped for that purpose.

The old hospital on the south side of Wolfe street, between Pitt and St. Asaph streets, which ceased to be used as a hospital today, will be hereafter used as a boarding and rooming house for a number of employees of the plant of the Washington Steel and Ordnance Company, and others.

The old hospital was founded as an infirmary by the late Miss Julia Johns in 1872.

The present structure cost about $75,000 and was built by Richardson & Co.

Quick Relief from Constipation

GET E-Z TABLETS AND BE ALWAYS HEALTHY

That is the joyful cry of thousands since E-Z Tablets have been discovered as the substitute for calomel.

E-Z Tablets do not contain any calomel, but a healing, soothing, vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little chocolate-covered tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force the organs to unnatural action. If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then, a bad breath, a dull, tired feeling, sick headache, torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two E-Z Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right—to keep the entire system "in tune." They are excellent for dyspepsia and insomnia also.

One hundred little chocolate-covered tablets cost 25c. Sample package, 5c. Sold by

EXPRESS COMPANIES MAY CALL EMBARGO

War Business Forces Use of Freight Cars for Transit.

Express companies in Washington, on account of lack of sufficient rolling stock, may be forced in the next day or two to declare a temporary embargo on the acceptance of all except government shipments and foodstuffs.

This has been done in New York, where all three of the biggest companies, the Wells Fargo, American and Adams abandoned all local transfer service for the first time in their history. The congestion is largely due to troop movements and government business.

Although an official of the local offices of one of the largest companies stated that the volume of the company's business has tripled in the past week over the corresponding period of last year, no orders or shipments with reference to the declaring an embargo have been received.

It was stated at the Washington office of the Adams Company that the volume of the company's business is using many freight cars as regular express cars. Such cars are sealed and put through at the same rate of speed as the regular express cars.

DROPS DIVORCE SUIT.
Mrs. Minnie A. Tull, wife of Jesse W. Tull, a clerk in the General Land Office, dropped her suit for limited divorce yesterday, having adjusted the differences between herself and her husband. The couple were married in March 1889 and have two children, the oldest being over 21. They were separated in 1908. Mrs. Tull, in her petition, filed through Attorney W. C. Balderston, charged her husband with cruelty and non-support.

ACCOUNTANTS CLOSE ANNUAL CONVENTION

Governing Committees Appointed at Final Session Here.

Closing the successful four-day meetings of the American Accountants' Institute annual convention, held in Washington, members of committees were yesterday appointed by the council of that organization. By last night a majority of the 22 delegates in attendance had left the Capital for their homes in various sections of the country, all expressing themselves as confident that much practical help would be gained by the profession from the Washington convention, especially in the war service of the organization, which will follow broadly the methods of British accountants since the beginning of the war.

W. Sanders Davies was named president of the executive committee, Adam Ross treasurer, and Hamilton R. Smith, R. Montgomery, Elijah W. Sells, and J. E. Sterrett members. The chairman of the committee on professional ethics is Carl H. Nau, of Cleveland; William M. Crockett, Kansas City; J. Porter Joplin, Chicago; T. E. Ross, Philadelphia, and C. H. Tuttle, Boston, as members. Elected to serve three-year terms on the board of examiners were Charles S. Ludlum, New York City; Waldron H. Rand, Boston, and H. Iver Thomas, Los Angeles.

George O. May, of New York City, was appointed at the final session to fill the two years unexpired term of F. G. Dulio, resigned, and John B. Niven to continue the one year unexpired term of W. D. White, also resigned. At the same meeting A. P. Richardson was re-elected secretary.

New York, Day by Day
By O. O. MCINTYRE

New York, Sept. 20.—As Samuel Pepys would record in his diary: Up early to arrange my affairs for a fortnight in the country and came C. H. Nau, of Cleveland, to the hotel and remarked naively that the Germans were going to have a rigorous winter and that he was tired of the whole Riganorale.

All of which is reminiscent of the jest of the man who declared that he did not believe the stories about the Germans dropping poisoned candy in the streets and drinking coffee.

For a stroll in the Park and find the leaves falling and the air crisp and all the townfolk are returning from the seaside. And on the Mall the red and white uniforms of the army and the uniforms of the navy are seen.

And he complained not a whit of his infirmities but looked upon the world with a cheery eye. And he has been a good deal of a disappointment to him. And he gave me his name and his street number and I went to the flower shop and dispatched to him a bunch of roses.

Much talk in the cafes of the lack of young men for dancing partners on account of the world tragedy which struck me as nothing to worry about. To my dentist where I joyfully remarked that I wanted a fang removed and he spoke of it as a blue-eyed and a blue-eyed and a blue-eyed.

And he jabbed a nut-pick in the cavity and I grabbed him by the whiskers and screamed "Murder," and he removed the fang and I went home where I boasted to my wife, poor wretch, of my heroism and she seemed not at all impressed. To the station and by train to the country, very tired. And so to bed.

West Sixty-seventh street, between Central Park west and Columbus avenue, has been christened the "high-brow belt" by the sob sisters on New York journals. A few years ago West Sixty-seventh street was about as conspicuous in metropolitan life as a dress suit at the opera.

Then Charles Dana Gibson picked out the street for the co-operative studio known as Cafe des Artistes. On the same block another co-operative studio for artists and musicians was erected. Now the street is lined with studio buildings for artists and musicians.

One stumbles over the great at every step. On one walk through the thoroughfare I saw James Montgomery Flagg, a master of pen and ink; Franklin Kitchin, dean of the voice teachers; Arthur William Brown, the short story illustrator de luxe and many other of the celebrities who are carving special niches in the world of art.

Gone are the glories of Washington Square and Greenwich Village. Only the struggling Bohemians who inhabit the slums there now. The new world of art resides in imposing buildings and glides about in limousines.

There was a wild argument in a Sixth avenue self-service restaurant the other morning which progressed as far as the street. It appeared from the general oral clamor that some attendant had removed a cup of coffee and a piece of pie from one of the tables while the owner was busy getting more food in another part of the restaurant. "The boneheads," remarked the indignant diner, to a group on the curb. "When I goes after a sandwich I put my finger across the top of my coffee and a fork across my pie. Of course, anyone knows that means I'm coming back. An' the clean-up guy takes it all away. Kin'y beat that?"

Experiments are being made in England to determine whether wattle bark, after it has been used by tanners, can be utilized in the making of paper. Large quantities of the bark are now on hand.

Farmer Should Have Trade-Mark

In Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, a writer says:

"Farmers everywhere have adopted farm names, but farm trade-marks are scarce. To the producer striving to establish a reputation, the distinctive trade-mark, considered so indispensable in manufacturing, has decided value. And it is inexpensive.

"The trade-mark should carry a definite message. One New England woman has a pen-and-ink sketch of a dainty little girl carrying a basket overflowing with eggs. This trade-mark appears on her stationery, her business cards, and her shipping containers. She believes the trade-mark has definite value in her business, much of which is done by mail.

"Another example is an apple farm going by the name 'Applescript,' which has for a trade-mark a colored crest in which appears the figure of an apple.

"The farm trade-mark goes hand in hand with quality. The producer of a first-class article gives it a trade-mark identifying it, and the demand grows fast."
